At the Heart of the Farming Family

Our locally based teams understand farming's many complex challenges. Our role is to listen and support individuals and families, helping them to identify the root causes of issues and assisting them to find ways to move forwards with increased resilience. The sooner people contact us, the sooner we can begin to support them with their journey to find solutions.

If you currently work in farming, are unable to work due to illness, accident or disability or have retired, then we can support you. We also assist family members.

We offer guidance, advice and will introduce you to other providers if you require support and we are unable to assist directly. We provide advice about benefits, wellbeing support, financial grants and professional training. If you require financial support we'll complete a quick financial assessment with you, however most people with limited savings or on a low income will usually qualify.

Sometimes, all it takes is a small amount of support at the right time to get things back on track.

Vital Financial Support

Established by Royal Charter in 1860, our work continues to make a significant difference to thousands of farming families.

Ongoing support from the wider farming community, fundraisers and our corporate partners is fundamental to ensuring that RABI can continue to fund the important services we provide.

Every penny, in every pound donated goes out the door in charitable support. This means all fundraising activity makes a real, measurable difference – thank you.

A Network of Support

Our team live and work across England and Wales so there's always someone local to hand, who understands the challenges you face.

People approach us for support for many different reasons and often it is a combination of factors that include: workload pressures, financial worries, volatile market prices, policy change, loss of subsidies, labour shortages, extreme weather, environmental pressures, illness, accidents, poor harvest, family breakdown, bereavement, animal disease and farm succession issues.

Against the continuing backdrop of challenges and uncertainties, RABI is constantly developing new services to better meet the changing needs of farming people. Visit our website for the latest updates.
